Flash? Where?

"Don't begin ranking Alexander," writes in a fan, "with Mathewson, Johnson, Walsh and others until he has been at it longer. One season's flash doesn't mean a great pitcher. There have been several who have had a flash for one season-but they couldn't last."

Alexander is now several leagues beyond any mere flash. We wonder if the fanatic who gave vent to this thought knows that in 1911, his first year out, Alexander won 28 games; in 1912 he lander 19 victories; in 1913 he bagged pa 22 starts out of 30 games; last season his total was 27 victories. So Alexander has had four fine years back of him and his fifth promises to be well beyond them all. He was ranked by all ball players as the star pitcher of the National League last year—the hardest man to beat. He will certainly maintain that same standard this year. If Alexander is merely a "flash," how long does a bloke have to operate above par to be considered an established article? About every other week Jack Coombs is read out of the profession with his pitching days over. And some twenty-four hours later Mr. Combs reports with most of the old time stuff that lifted him to the top nine years ago.

We have at last run across the world's record in conservative propliccy. It comes from a scribe who, in sixing up the American League race, writes that "it looks now as if the White Sox, Red Sox or Tigers will land the Ban Johnson bunting this season." When you come to think it over, the fellow may be right.

It's a pity that California hasn't any tennis players of first rank. Something ought to be done about it.

The Resolute took in her balloon jib topsail at 1:30 and set a reacher and her jib and staysail, and this had the effect of holding off the Vanitie, which came up fast as the wind freshened.

The Resolute, petting the new breeze of the Cholera Back, passed her rival, and she had a good lead before it reached the Vanitie. Both had taken in their ballooners and hauled on the wind on the starboard tack.

It was so hazy that the outer mark was not seen until the yachts were within a mile of it. They approached it with small reachers set, and the times taken as they luffed around it were: Resolute had gained 5 minutes 16 seconds in the last five miles.

Instead of being a beat to windward for the second half of the course, the wind now from a little west of south made it a reach back to the finish, so, with a ballooner set to starboard on the Resolute and a reacher on the Vanitie, the nair began their struggle of fifteen miles to the finish in a right breeze, and hazy weather for the first half, and clearing skies and freshening breezes for the last half.

The Resolute took in her balloon jib topsail at 1:30 and set a reacher and
